Assessment Plan (AY 2013-2014)

M.A. in Communication Studies
College of Humanities and Social Sciences
Kean University

Mission:

The mission of the Master’s program in Communication Studies is consistent with the mission of the School of Communication, Media and Journalism (formerly Department of Communication).

The School of Communication, Media and Journalism encourages students to engage in all forms of critical dialogue to succeed in a globalized society. Students are taught to use theory, research, praxis, and ethics in order to problem-solve in a media-rich and diverse world. The School of Communication, Media and Journalism believes that students should value critical listening and viewing, public speaking, community building, and intellectual curiosity as necessary components of effective communication.

The Master of Arts in Communication Studies links the process of human communication with organizational behavior, interpersonal relationships, leadership, culture and management practices within a diverse and changing society. Students are provided the opportunity to engage in multifaceted course of study that integrates both theoretical frameworks and practical approaches. The program not only prepares students for advanced doctoral study, but also equips them with competent communication skills needed in a workplace. In addition to the Master’s degree, we also offer four certificate programs in conflict resolution, leadership, public speaking, and public relations/journalism.

Assessment Process:

Students in the Master’s program in Communication Studies need to complete eleven courses with three required courses taken during their studies. These include COMM 5004 (Organizational Communication Theory), COMM 5006 (Organizational Culture) and COMM 5002 (Quantitative Research Methods) or COMM 5005 (Interpretive Research Methods). Learning objectives are reinforced throughout the program. At the completion of seven courses students are permitted to take the comprehensive exam. The Communication graduate program’s comprehensive exam consists of a four-hour written exam and a one-hour oral defense. Each student will choose a committee of three faculty members. Each faculty member creates a question for the student. During the written exam the student writes answers to all three questions. During the oral defense the student meets with all three committee members for clarification and more in-depth responses to questions. The three committee members then evaluate each student’s written and oral performance on a Likert scale. The questions on the evaluation form are related to the student learning objectives. Based on the evaluation results, the student may be asked to complete more written/research work at this time and a plan is created for their completion of the program or they can be passed for satisfactory or distinguished work in the program.
