

Participant Incentives: Gift Cards - Grants

Definitions

Participant Incentives: Incentive payments to volunteers participating in a grant-supported project or program are allowable. Participant Incentives are payments made to individuals to motivate them to take advantage of grant-supported services. They are only allowable if within the scope of an approved project.

Participant Support: Are direct costs for items such as stipends, travel allowances, and registration fees paid to or on behalf of participants or trainees (but not employees) in connection with conferences, or training projects.

Kean ORSP Policy Guideline: SP02

Participant incentives are used in university research to encourage participation and acknowledge the effort of research participants.

Considerations for Incentives

- Ethical Guidelines: Ensure the incentives are not coercive and comply with Institutional Review Board (IRB) regulations.
- Cultural Appropriateness: Tailor incentives to the cultural norms of the target population.
- Budget: Select incentives that align with the funding available for the study.

Monetary Incentives

Gift Cards: Gift cards to popular retailers or online stores like Amazon, Target, Starbucks, Visa gift cards or the campus bookstore.

- See gift card authorization and purchasing instructions below.

Non-Monetary Incentives

Merchandise: University-branded items such as t-shirts, mugs, or tote bags.

Event Tickets: Free or discounted tickets to campus events, concerts, or sports games.

Food and Beverages: Providing snacks, meals, or coffee during in-person studies.
